Homography

An homography is a mathematical transformation that relates points in one plane to points in another plane. It is represented by a 3x3 matrix called homography or transformation matrix.

In computer vision, an homography describes a perspective distortion between two images or views of the same scene taken from different positions or angles.